

Get western! Chamber sponsors contest

Elk Point Chamber of Commerce wants you and your business to dress western next week, as the community gears up for the 2nd Annual Spring Classic Stampede, sponsored by Elk Point and District Agricultural Society on May 8 and 9. Member businesses will be judged during the week of May 3 to 8, and the business with the best western decor and whose staff is dressed in western clothing will win a trophy from the Chamber.

Last week's regular meeting of the Chamber centred on discussion of the brief presented April 20 to the Northern Alberta Development Council by President Louise Crane on behalf of the Chamber, regarding the economic slump in the community. The Chamber's Economic Development committee will be studying the economic situation and will have a report for the Chamber's May 5 meeting.

Discussion of a promotional event for Farmers Day was deferred to the next meeting, which will give members more time to gather ideas.

A discussion regarding the Canada Day Pancake Breakfast led to a suggestion that the Chamber look into purchasing a portable gas fired grill of their own, which would end the need to rent or borrow a grill, as has been done in recent years. A suggestion was made that businesses which would like to have pancake breakfasts and similar events might be willing to contribute to the project, in return for free use of the grill in the future. The purchase is currently being looked into.

Sid Holthe reported on the Interagency Committee meeting, and also outlined the events coming up during Seniors Week, June 6 to 12. The week will start with an interdenominational worship service, noon lunch and program at Heritage Lodge, and include bingos, a dance, a field trip and the 20th Anniversary celebrations for the Pioneer Circle.

OUT OF ORDER

Sorry, we are missing some stories and photos this week due to computer breakdown. Watch for them next week.

BIG CLEANUP JOB - Crews with pressure hoses, vacuum trucks and shovels have been hard at work this week after an oil spill south of Northern Valley Store, south and east of Elk Point. Further details on the spill will be reported when available.

Trefanenkenko gets Tory nod

The community of Vilna took on a definite shade of Tory blue Sunday afternoon as an estimated 550 Lac La Biche - St. Paul Progressive Conservatives turned out to select a candidate to lead them into the next provincial election. That candidate will be John Trefanenkenko.

After Trefanenkenko's victory was announced, his rival in the nomination bid, Al Poirier, was the first to offer his congratulations and expressed the hope that now the constituency PCs could move forward as a united front.

A total of 1,283 ballots were cast, including 957 at the advance poll Wednesday, according to returning officer Dave Williams. While he would not release the number of votes each candidate received, The St. Paul Journal was told by one source that Trefanenkenko won by a margin of 37 votes. However, that figure has not been confirmed.

Trefanenkenko expressed his appreciation to his family, campaign team and supporters for their vote of confidence in him. He also spoke of the need for all constituency PCs to now work together to

NADC meets in Elk Point

The Northern Alberta Development Council visited Elk Point on Tuesday, April 20, and received over twenty briefs dealing with a wide array of topics. The NADC is an advisory council which presents a northern point of view to the provincial government.

Six briefs were presented by Elk Point groups, two of these by the Town of Elk Point. Mayor Ed Buck, who also welcomed the NADC to the community and led a standing ovation for MLAs Al "Boomer" Adair and John Drobot, both of whom are retiring, presented the first brief of the evening, dealing with the extension of the runway at Elk Point Municipal Airport from its current length of 2950 feet to 4450 feet. This would allow safe usage for larger jet aircraft, and has been asked for by oil companies in the area. The Canadian Business Aircraft Association has met with the Province about the extension, with the government indicating they would pay fifty percent. The CBAA would also contribute substantially, with the remainder to be shared between the Town of Elk Point and the County of St. Paul.

Briefs outline runaway cost economic slump

A subsequent meeting including all four groups brought a shock, with the estimated cost of $420,000 sizeably larger than first indications. The Town has not committed itself to the project at this time, Buck said, but they do recognize the value of the extension, and realize that failure to lengthen the runway could result in heavy economic loss to the community. Town Council is reluctant to raise taxes to pay for the extension, and also is concerned with the increase in maintenance costs that would result from both the runway itself and increased traffic.

The Town's second brief, also presented by Mayor Buck, was in support of a brief presented by Elk Point Chamber of Commerce and the concern shared by both Council and Chamber regarding economic development.

Chamber President Louise Crane told the NADC that during the community's rapid growth period in the mid 1980s, the NADC was instrumental in accessing guidance for their decision making. Now, with the recent economic downturn, Elk Point is "on the other end of the pendulum," in a slow growth, no growth phase, and needs to come up with new ideas, new directions and creative solutions to local economic concerns. Factors affecting the direction of the Chamber and its ability to attract new business include the shift of the tax base from commercial to residential, declining market values, an infrastructure which was created to serve a much larger population, which now creates a tax burden by its operation, maintenance and debt servicing, and lack of funds for direct promotion or for hiring economic development personnel. The Chamber would like to be actively involved in revitalizing the community, and would like to know how to investigate the feasibility of issuing community bonds, attracting new manufacturing concerns, encouraging location of at-home workers; lobbying for decentralized government offices, and encouraging the placement of a regional economic development fund which could be borrowed from to assist small business.

Elk Point Hospital Board representative Marvin Bjornstad said he had also made a presentation at the NADC's November 17 meeting in Bonnyville, at which time the Board was awaiting word on the final approval of the $5.1 million addition to the hospital. "A week later, things really started to move," Bjornstad said, and now work is underway. He thanked MLA John Drobot for his involvement in making the project come about. The Board is now concerned with the GST which will be payable on the project. Even though the hospital will be refunded 83 percent of the tax, the remaining 17 percent will result in an $80,000 shortfall, and Bjornstad asked the NADC for help in finding a solution to this problem. He thanked the NADC for their help in physician recruitment, but said they had not yet been able to obtain a physician and were now looking at recruitment in Saskatchewan, where many health care centres are being closed.

Frank Mayner of the Elk Point Historical Society told the Council that the Society, which was instrumental in lobbying for the development of the Fort George - Buckingham House Interpretive Centre, now intends to take the next step, by applying for Northern Alberta Agreement funds for construction of the 'big house' adjacent to the Fort George site. Mayner said this would be a smooth continuation of the program, and noted that when three options for development of the site were made, Option A called for construction of the interpretive centre, while Option B called for partial reconstruction of the forts. The addition of the 'big house' would have a marked effect on visitation, with over a 56 percent increase projected, and would have a significant impact on the region. The estimated cost of the project would be $1.6 million.

Adele Mandryk, co-visionary of the Elk Point Bicentennial, was on hand to extend "an incredible thank you, thank you, thank you" to the NADC for their support of the Bicentennial from the very beginning, when they pointed the group toward Business Initiatives funding, which helped them get underway. She presented copies of the final Bicentennial Report to each member of the Council, and said the Bicentennial, "a major experiment in economic development through heritage tourism," had been a major success. Ms Mandryk said that $180,000 had been spent on the Bicentennial over three years, and had brought a $700,000 direct economic impact for the community. Spinoffs resulting from the Bicentennial include a three year genealogy project, fur trade catering, plans for wagon train vacations, tourism courses, minor and major publishing projects and an elementary school history project. The Bicentennial won the Tourism Industry of Alberta's 1992 Heritage Tourism Award, and the 1993 Distinguished Merit award from the Edmonton and District Historical Society. The Bicentennial visionaries are now "a valuable resource," Ms Mandryk said, and are willing to assist other communities with advice on other major celebrations. This presentation was the only one to receive applause, and, quipped NADC Chairman "Boomer" Adair, the only one which did not ask for money. Council member Jack Newman complimented the Bicentennial Society for a job well done, and said he was well aware of the work involved, as he had served as the chairman of the Fort Vermilion Bicentennial.

Randy Parenteau of Fishing Lake Metis Settlement asked for paving of the remaining stretch of Secondary Highway 897 from Frog Lake to its junction with Secondary Highway 659 east of Bonnyville, and the designation of the loop from Frog Lake store east through Sputnikow and looping around the lake past Riel Beach campground to join with 897, as Secondary Highway 897A. The road provides access to Bonnyville for the oil industry as well as residents of the settlement, and links both communities with Lloydminster.

Catastrophe number two

I'm beginning to believe I should stay home, since facing the second home-coming after visiting my kids, and finding a grim situation staring me in the eyes upon arrival.

In December, over Christmas, I visited family members in Edmonton, only to return home on that late bus on the eve of the New Year to find my household water system froze-up. Unlike the infamous city plumbers I've heard are unattainable-sometimes for days-our local plumber arrived early the next day and did his utmost to restore my H2O to normal as soon as ever he could. What with the bitter cold out and the age of my equipment, it was three days before I could flush and slosh to my heart's content.

There was plenty of snow to bring in and melt, but I am so spoiled by having water in the taps that I no longer have tubs and boilers or a reservoir on my kitchen range, to fill with snow to melt into emergency water. All I had / have is a medium size enamel pail, used to carry rainwater from the barrel to the flowers in my yard in summer.

I filled it with powdery light snow, put it on my front burner, then refilled it countless times with a plastic basin, until the water level neared the top of my pail (about twenty refills). So - now, enough water to wash my hands. BUT, we needed many pail-fuls to reprime the pump in the basement, and to pour, hot, down the pipes to thaw the ice block. My daughter Lyn kindly brought me a few milk jugsful from their well, for coffee and drinking and such.

But the well recovered, and my aqua flowed freely these past three and a half months. I made the mistake of going off to visit my other section of family, over Easter and beyond, for a couple of weeks.

This time, I remembered to disconnect the pump, left no taps on, no toilet flushing. All seemed well, when I arrived home on that even-later bus, I had a drink, washed my face, but, so very tired, postponed my tubbing to the morning.

I noticed a cloudy look to the water when I filled the coffee maker in my usual early morning fog, but it was when, after turning the taps, I glanced into the tub with three inches of brown 'gravy' sudsing away, that I knew all was not well.

It was not a pretty sight. It also smelled like rotten wood.

The plank cribbing, after 26 years of standing upright, down in the damp, cold ground, had given up the ghost, crumbled and caved in upon itself, until my pipes were full of rotted wood, mold and sand.

I ran a bit of the muddy

RURAL GAS PROGRAM Uniquely Albertan

Fulfilling a promise to rural Albertans

Did you know that Alberta farmers and other rural Albertans enjoy a basic utility service that is not widely available in any other farming community?

Are you aware that Alberta farmers enjoy the lowest farm fuel costs in North America? And did you know that Alberta has the largest rural gas pipeline system in the world?

In May, 1973, the Government of Alberta embarked on a unique program "to make natural gas service available to rural Albertans at a reasonable cost". The Alberta Rural Gas Program is fulfilling a promise that rural Albertans should share the benefits of the province's natural resources. Since 1973, 143,500 new and replacement rural gas services have been installed under the program.

An additional 4,700 services are currently being added each year to heat homes, to fuel agriculture equipment, and to encourage industry to locate in rural areas.

One of the program's original objectives was to help preserve the family farm. D.G. Miller, who runs a large hog operation near Crossfield, appears to feel that objective has been met. "Natural gas has really helped us to keep our 4th generation family farm operation viable", suggests Mr. Miller. Mel Williamson, whose 1,000 acre mixed grain and cattle operation east of Lomond relies on natural gas for irrigation, is equally as pleased with rural gas service. So is Rene Garant, who operates a 4,000 acre farm near Donnelly and who uses gas for his grain drying operations.

By any measure, rural gasification is proving to be a resounding success. It is an example of how Government, industry and individuals can work together. It is an example of a sound economic investment in the future of rural Alberta. And it has confirmed that the pioneer spirit of Alberta's farmers, who have contributed so much to the program's success, still exists.

Grants make the difference

Before the Rural Gas Program, the only farmers who had access to gas service were those who were fortunate enough to live close to a gas pipeline. Other farmers, and many residents of small rural communities, were not so fortunate. The cost to bring gas service to their farms and homes was just too expensive.

In the Government's view, this disadvantage seemed unfair. After all, Alberta's massive reserves of natural gas are produced all over rural Alberta, and the royalties flowing from these reserves should be benefiting all Albertans. So the Government created a grant assistance formula to equalize the opportunities for gas service. The formula has a number of key features:

In each rural utility system, capital costs are pooled and all consumers pay the same price to obtain service.

In each rural utility system, capital costs are pooled and all consumers pay the same price to obtain service.

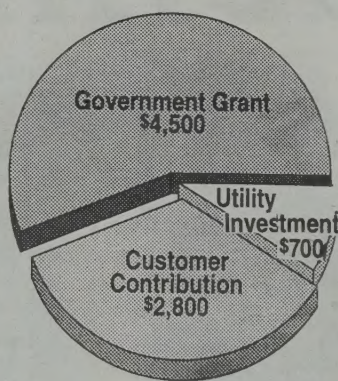

Grants are paid only where they are needed. If the cost to supply service is affordable without grant assistance, no grants are provided.

To reduce administrative costs, grants are paid directly to the local gas co-op, municipality, or utility company on behalf of individual consumers. The grants are then used to reduce the consumer's cost to an affordable level.

The pie chart shows how a typical capital cost of $8,000 for a farm service is funded. With very few exceptions, every rural gas consumer in the province has benefited from grant assistance under this program.

20 years and growing stronger.

Congratulations to our Gas Co-ops, County and Native Band gas systems on the 20th Anniversary of the Rural Gas Program.

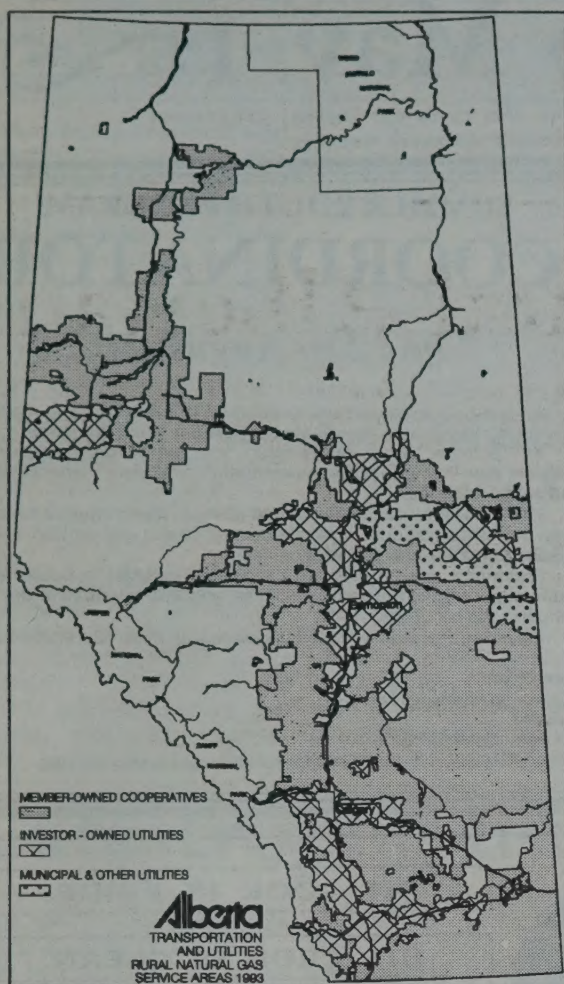

In the past 20 years, the delivery of natural gas to rural Alberta has expanded dramatically. Today, some 66,000 farmers and rural acreage residents are using environmentally clean, safe, reliable natural gas through these member owned and operated county systems. That means service to nearly every rural resident in the province!

This rural gas program is unique in the world. It's remarkable success is due to the foresight, hard work and cooperation of everyone involved: the co-op directors, county boards, land owners, regulatory bodies, suppliers and provincial government. The real winner is the customer, who enjoys the benefits not only of lower cost fuel, but the comfort, safety and convenience of natural gas.

The Federation of Alberta Gas Co-ops Ltd. will continue to work closely with everyone involved to ensure the continued success of this outstanding program. Congratulations to all!

FEDERATION OF ALBERTA GAS CO-OPS LTD.

Successful partnership

The Government established the foundation for the gasification of rural Alberta by putting legislation in place and by making grants available for pipeline construction. However, the delivery of the program was carried out in partnership with Alberta farmers and industry.

Thanks to the tremendous co-operation provided by Alberta gas producers and pipeline shippers, gas supplies for rural consumers have proven to be extremely reliable over the past twenty years. When it came to building a pipeline system that would deliver gas to their homes, rural Albertans were free to choose the type of utility that suited them best. Many opted for the proven reliability of a private utility company or a municipal utility, while those who wanted full control over their gas system chose to form a local gas co-operative.

As the map illustrates, most regions opted for a co-op system, while others decided that a municipal or private utility system was a better choice. Each system has its own benefits, but all have proved to be very successful.

The communities that opted to create their own natural gas co-operative probably didn't realize it at the time, but they were creating something that was truly unique. Private and municipal gas utilities are common throughout the world, but rural gas co-ops can only be found in Alberta!

Investment in the future

The Rural Gas Program is a solid investment in the future of rural Alberta. The capital investment to date is approximately $680 million, including $390 million in Government grants. The return on this investment has been tremendous. By displacing higher-priced fuels, rural consumers have saved about $1.8 billion so far, and those savings are continuing to grow by around $160 million each year.

The program also benefits the rural economy through capital and operating expenditures of around $115 million each year.

Celebrate!

20 Years of Rural Gas Service

Ralph Klein
Premier of Alberta

Peter Trynchy
Minister, Transportation and Utilities

If you're a rural Albertan, you may be part of something that's unique on a world-wide scale and a real success story... the Alberta Rural Gas Program.

Twenty years ago, the Government of Alberta set out to develop the world's largest rural gas pipeline system. This system would provide farmers and other rural Albertans with access to a valuable service that residents of large urban centres take for granted.

Today, that pipeline system is over 60,000 miles long. That's enough pipe to circle the globe 2 1/2 times. It's a system built on a successful partnership between Government, farmers and industry, and it's now bringing tremendous economic benefits to rural Alberta.

On this 20th anniversary of the Rural Gas Program, we really do have something to celebrate. Together, we're making rural Alberta a great place to live!

Highway cleanup May 1

Drivers on Alberta highways should travel with extra caution on Saturday, May 1 as thousands of volunteers will be picking up litter from the road shoulders from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. during Alberta Transportation and Utilities' annual highway cleanup campaign.

This is the 17th year of the department's clean up campaign. Last year, 7824 youth volunteers and 4666 adult supervisors gathered 55,672 bags of litter from alongside Alberta's primary highways.

"Anytime you have this many people in area where traffic is present, extra caution is required," said Transportation and Utilities Minister Peter Trynchy. "Even though all volunteers have attended a training session it's critical that drivers be alert for the unexpected. Volunteers will be wearing bright orange safety vests, and signs will be placed to advise drivers when they are entering a clean up area. Safety is our main concern during this clean up. Please are present." slow down wherever workers Muster® is more than a herbicide. It's an investment that pays off in the fall.

Why let stinkweed or wild mustard cut into the yield potential of your canola crop?

- MUSTER cleans the stinkweed, wild mustard, smartweed and hemp-nettle out of canola.

- MUSTER tank-mixes with Assure® or Poast® herbicides to control both broadleaf and grass weeds.

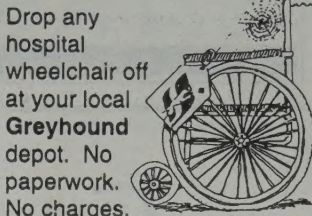

See your local dealer or call the Du Pont Ag Products Hotline at 1-800-667-3925.

WHAT'S NEWS AT THE LIBRARY?

The Library Board and staff hosted a Volunteer Appreciation Night the evening of April 20 in the library for in-library volunteers. Certificates of appreciation, volunteer pins and corsages were presented to each of the nine volunteers present. Special presentations were made to Lena Stepa for her 30 years of volunteer service and to Anna May Warren for her 20 years of volunteer service. Volunteer pins were also presented to our hard working volunteer Library Board members.

Daphne Schnurer, Board Chairperson, also thanked the members of the Friends of Elk Point Library. This group sponsored three successful bingos and helped at our successful community garage sale. As the longest serving volunteer, Lena Stepa cut the beautifully decorated cake that displayed a "Thank You Library Volunteers" message.

? Of The Week

The question of the week is: What citizen of Alberta has held all of the following titles: Author, politician, historian, agriculturalist, lecturer, mayor of Calgary and Lieutenant Governor of Alberta?

Northern Lights Library Sustem kindly shared their booth at the Trade Fair with the Elk Point Public Library. Lisa Nielsen won the draw for the basket of library related material including one adult book, one child's book and a library membership. The book from the NLLS was won by Peter Danyluk. Thank you all for stopping to visit and en-

Don't forget the writers' workshop the evening of April 27 at 7 p.m. See you there!

The Friends of Elk Point Library have been awarded a bingo in St. Paul at Club Bingo on the evening of Thursday, May 11. A sign up sheet for workers is at the front desk in the library, please come in and volunteer.

New Books

Helen Forrester's novel, The Liverpool Basque is a moving and fascinating portrait of a small community and a time long past. This extraordinary novel is the story of Manuel Echaniz, a Basque. It's also about his childhood and coming-of-age in the teeming streets of Liverpool's docklands.

The Fishes of Alberta by Joseph Nelson and Martin Paetz is a completely revised edition. It includes up-to-date information on distribution, new species, and biology of Alberta's fish. Topics include background on the province's fish and their environment, fishing in Alberta, fish management in Alberta, and post-glacial origins of fish fauna and the classification of fish.

In our video collection, the movie The Horse Soldiers is a rousing action picture packed with laughter, romance, and thrills that offers entertainment for every taste and age group.

For our young viewers we have two Berenstain Bears videos, The Berenstain Bears Get In A Fight and The Berenstain Bears Meet Bigpaw.

stuff into a pan, thinking it would do to water the plants, and that was it. No more drops. So the tank and pipes are likely chock-full of crud, dissolved pine plank and sad, clay, and maybe even rocks.

After procuring the name of a well-driller, from neighbors and the phone book, and actually speaking with him, with a promise of "taking a look" almost right away, I was able to breathe easier. My utter despair is that some such catastrophe will eventually drive me off my country life, and into town, where I can be "looked after" - a fate I plan to postpone as long as ever I can.

Now, with the tall derrick towering over the big truck, and the growl of massive machinery, I feel there is hope I'll have water by the time I get the dishwasher full, or all the laundry baskets overflowing.

Not that I expect instant clean water; in our years here on the farm, we have had five wells to contend with, mostly hand-dug, and fairly shallow. It takes quite a while for the water to run clean and clear. I am always astonished at the miracle of finding water down there, many feet below the surface of the earth, let alone that it is clean, clear and sweet-tasting. Usually about a week after digging would see the water quite clear.

Meanwhile, I know about the laundry in town, and all my neighbors have offered water, even to bring me water, until it's off and running again.

But this will be a very deep well, small bore, with vinyl (or plastic?) cribbing, no chance of caving in, and, I'm told by neighbors who have them, lots of water - some even have soft water.

So, as the machinery throbs, I've gone out to have a look. The bit (or auger) spins in its place, bathed in water. But now rocks are threatening to jam it. The helper bangs at it, and sudden mud and water rush out, much of it finding the drillers' boots and coveralls. They are both liberally sluiced in soft mud. I tell them they have a good job; not everyone can go out to work and get plastered, and be paid for it.

I do hope my rocks are not so crisp and strong as to stop their bit from cutting through, down to the streams of water I cannot live without. What a very good earth we have! It supplies us with our daily needs of food and water, and often much we don't really need, like gold and diamonds and such, even to the fuel for our warmth and comfort, and the wherewithal to propel our vehicles of all our far corners, below the seas and into the clouds. On top of all that, we walk on it and are buried in it. I have great respect for our good planet Earth.
